Building a Legacy

The Alaska Women's Hall of Fame (AWHOF) was a collaborative project of several non-profits and a collection of Alaskan women. Fourteen years later, we continue to operate as a volunteer-run, donation-support organization. Our success is a testament to our communities' investment in honoring the women who have shaped our lives in Alaska.

Your support is critical to our success.

FINANCIAL

Financial donations are used to guarantee our virtual hall, alaskawomenshalloffame.org a secure environment. You can donate by mailing a check to Alaska Women's Hall of Fame, 1063 W 20th Ave., Anchorage, AK 99503 or on-line.

RESEARCH AND NOMINATE

Your nominations are critical to the Alaska Women's Hall of Fame continuing to reflect the diversity of our communities. For information on how to nominate visit the website. Nominations for the Class of 2024 open October 19, 2023.

VOLUNTEER AND WRITE

We are searching for volunteers interested in writing biographies for the hall, serving on the board or selection committee. If you are interested in becoming a biographer, email the board at info@alaskawomenshalloffame.org.

Thank You..... 20

Welcome!

Welcome to the 15th year of the Alaska Women's Hall of Fame. We are pleased to present eleven women to be inducted this year. The highlight of our year at the Alaska Women's Hall of Fame is to celebrate the women who have influenced the direction of Alaska!

Our virtual "Hall of Fame" is our web site, which is Alaskawomenshalloffame.org. It includes the biographies and photos of more than 200 honorees who have been inducted since 2009.

We have many people to thank who support us. Thank you to all who nominated women for this honor. We encourage everyone to nominate a woman using the application on our web site. The nomination process for 2024 will open October 19th. Think of a woman who has inspired you and nominate her for induction next year! Thank you to all who have contributed funds to the Alaska Women's Hall of Fame over the years. The Rasmuson Foundation and the Atwood Foundation have been particularly generous in the past, and the Alaska Community Foundation provided us with a grant this year. However, it is our individual donors who give us the capability of continuing as the Hall of Fame in Alaska. Thank you to each of you who have given so generously this year. You can contribute directly from our website or with a check.

A very special thank you to Jonathan Butzke, owner of Talking Circle Media, who has volunteered to video record this and most inductions of the Alaska Women's Hall of Fame, all of which you can hear and see on our web site. We would not have the ceremony that you are watching tonight on-line without him! Many of the women who are in the Hall of Fame continue to volunteer on our committees to select the next Honorees and to write and proof biographies that you read in our program tonight and on our website. Thank you to all of you and especially to those who serve on this year's Selection Committee.

Thank you to our volunteer Board of Directors who manage the web site, participate in selection, writing and proofing the biographies, maintaining communications with inductees and their families, preparing the program, raising money and planning this annual celebration.

Thanks for joining us,

Adelheid “Micky” Schmid Becker

Arts Advocate and Business

Micky Becker is an active member of the Alaska community. In her professional career and in philanthropic endeavors and civic involvement she is and has been an effective participant. She has held leadership roles in office management, public and community relations, social services organizations, and arts and culture boards, commissions, and endowments. She was born, raised, and educated in Germany.

Before retiring, she worked in the resources extraction industry (ARCO, ConocoPhillips, and Shell Exploration Co.) for thirty-five years. In addition to office management, she developed expertise in leading foreign government and industry officials during their visits to Alaska, ensuring international protocols were observed and briefing materials were prepared. In her private life, she has served on numerous boards of directors in Germany, Colorado, and Alaska.

She is passionate about the arts and has contributed her leadership and fundraising skills in that sector as well as in the social services sector for decades. She has spearheaded numerous fundraising campaigns and charitable events and has chaired many committees on a variety of organizational boards.

She currently serves on the Alaska Center for the Performing Arts Board, the Anchorage Senior Activity Center Board, the Alaska State Council on the Arts Board of Trustees, the Alaska Arts and Culture Foundation, and the Anchorage Symphony Endowment Board of Trustees. She is a member of the ATHENA Society. ☞

Dr. carolyn Joyce (Virden) Brown

Physician and Public Health Advocate

Dr. carolyn Brown worked as a physician in Alaska for over 50 years, with a focus on providing medical services to women from diverse backgrounds and those with limited resources.

Dr. Brown moved to Alaska in 1965 where she was a commissioned officer in the U.S. Public Health Service. Her initial service included work for the Alaska Native Hospital and she realized how the needs of Alaska Native women were often ignored. She developed a new Health Aide training program to prepare Alaska Natives to provide wellness care in village communities. This work informed the direction of her career. She went on to earn a Master of Public Health at the University of Hawaii.

Dr. Brown worked for the Anchorage Health Department in the early 1970s where she helped to develop low-cost health services. Together with her husband, she established a non-profit medical practice in the Mat-Su Valley in 1978 and was the first woman physician to practice at Palmer's Valley Hospital. Their medical practice focused on prevention and wellness and included efforts to provide services for women who otherwise could not afford them.

In 1989 Dr. Brown was appointed to a faculty position at the medical school at the University of Vermont. In 2001 Dr. Brown returned to Alaska to serve as a Deputy Commissioner of Public Health where she focused on public health initiatives for rural communities.

All of these accomplishments are notable for any woman born in 1937 and even more for Dr. Brown who was the first member of her family to graduate from high school. ☞

Victoria “Vicki” D’Amico

Victims Advocate and Educator

Vicki D’Amico was born in Bridgeport, Connecticut in 1956. She was mainly raised by her mother and was the youngest of three sisters. D’Amico followed a friend when she was only 18 years old to Sitka, Alaska.

D’Amico’s first job in Sitka was at the Sitka Native Education Program, supervised and mentored by clan mother Isabella Brady. She later befriended the Brady family and was adopted into the Kids’adi clan. In 1988, she began her career at Sitkans Against Family Violence (SAFV) as a relief advocate. She quickly became a full-time advocate and, during the next 33 years, she performed almost every job at SAFV before retiring as executive director in 2017. During her time at SAFV, she was solely on-call for crises and emergencies for many years.

D’Amico was a proficient legal advocate and helped countless survivors navigate the very intimidating legal system. She pioneered the work of trauma informed care before it was widely talked about or understood. As a survivor of domestic violence (DV) and sexual assault (SA) herself, she innately understood the needs of survivors. She worked to create a shelter environment that was empowering rather than punitive for the shelter residents at SAFV.

D’Amico was an engaging educator and worked over many years to provide education to community partners on the dynamics of DV and SA. She received a fellowship in child trauma intervention from the Yale University Medical School. She valued Tribal practices and worked closely with Sitka Tribe of Alaska, where she was admitted into the bar in Tribal Court.

D’Amico is still renowned as one of the best DV/SA advocates in the state of Alaska. In April 2023 at the Yaaw Koo.eex’ (Herring Ceremony), she was honored for her work as a protector of women and children and became caretaker of a herring robe. 𐔪

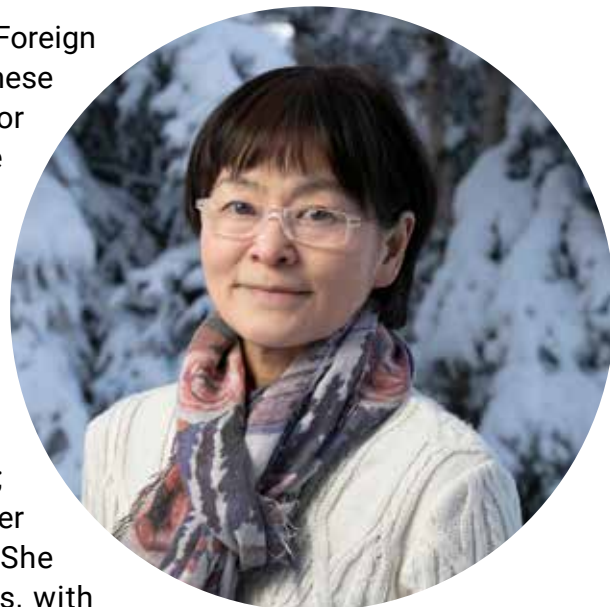

Hiroko Harada

Educator of Japanese Language

Hiroko Harada is widely known in Alaska, and internationally for her advocacy for Japanese education and international collaboration. From 1998 to 2023, at University of Alaska Anchorage (UAA) she taught all levels of Japanese language, plus special topics courses including Japanese folktales and pop culture, literature and history, business Japanese, Japanese calligraphy, and the historical ties between Japan and Alaska. She was a founding director of the Montgomery Dickson Center for Japanese Language and Culture. She established exchange programs and worked with K-12 immersion programs. She created “Monty’s Room,” a Tea Room at UAA.

As chair and member of Anchorage Sister Cities Commission, she advanced peace and understanding between nations, and she represents Anchorage with our sister city Chitose, Japan. For the 50th anniversary in 2019, she led fifteen Anchorage representatives to Chitose, strengthening the friendly relations between our two cities.

Among her awards, she received the Foreign Ministry Commendation from the Japanese government and was awarded Professor Emerita by UAA. She has an impressive publication list and television appearances in both the United States and Japan. Other leadership roles have included president of Alaskans for Language Acquisition, a professional K-16 Alaska language teachers’ organization; vice president of the Asian Alaskan Cultural Center; and coordinating the community Disaster Preparedness Education conference. She hosted Hiroshima-Amchitka Legacies, with the Anchorage mayor and noted speakers.

She has devoted her life to creating learning opportunities for all ages to deepen mutual understanding between Japan and Alaska. Her educational accomplishments, numerous grants, her many leadership roles—including those at UAA, chairing Anchorage Sister Cities Commission, and playing first violin in the Anchorage Symphony Orchestra—all inspire especially women to know that they, too, could aspire to a wide variety of educational and cultural roles. ㊦

Dorothy B. Isabell

Iñupiaq Healthcare and Political Advocate

Dorothy Isabell was one of three directors of the first Norton Sound Health Corporation (NSHC) formed in 1970; the Alaska Federation of Natives was developing a model for community-based health care service, giving Alaska Natives a voice in their own health care decisions. This first board had the task of bringing health care services to remote areas, stating in 1970 its goal to provide “a comprehensive and quality inpatient facility in Nome.” In 1971, the Health Aide program was established. Isabell became a NSHC Health Aide Assistant Trainer and traveled to many villages in the Norton Sound region to organize health clinics. She was instrumental in NSHC becoming the first in the nation to have tribally owned and run hospital care, and she traveled to Washington, D.C. several times to tell the story of health care needs of Alaska Native people in remote areas.

Isabell was active in other aspects of health care, working with alcohol abuse issues in the villages and providing alcohol awareness workshops for communities and schools. When the first women’s shelter opened in Nome, she coordinated services for domestic violence there for the first months. She served on many community boards and was passionate about the importance of setting up local health care organizations. She inspired the future (and now retired) CEO of NSHC, Carolyn Chowder, who first met her in a summer internship as a high school student and was taken under Isabell’s wing. Isabell was an advocate for women to further their education and for traditional values of gathering and sharing food, including women valuing themselves. ᐃ

Ada Dale Johnson

First Woman Sergeant in Alaska Corrections

Ada Johnson wanted to be a nurse from a young age, and she became a Licensed Practical Nurse as a young mother. She started her career with the Alaska Psychiatric Institute in 1963, and she was the first female and Black Correction Officer in Alaska with the rank of Sergeant from 1977 to 1987; these milestones were important to her, but she may have accomplished more in her volunteer work, including missions with the New Hope Baptist Church and traveling with the Baptist Nursing Fellowship to South Korea and Brazil. Other volunteering ranged from governor and senator campaigns in Alaska to health screenings with the Anchorage schools and assisting at the Pioneer Home, where she was named Volunteer of the Year for 1990/1991.

In 1994 was Johnson honored as a “Woman of Achievement” by the YWCA, Who’s Who in American Nursing in 1993/1994, and in 2012 she was one of twenty women in Alaska who were recognized as “Freedom Sisters” by the Ford Motor Company for promoting the equality and rights of African American women. When Johnson was relegated to a chair for several months after a fall in 2006, she saw mention on the news of “Little Girl Dresses for Africa,” a nonprofit in Michigan. She responded with her skills as a seamstress to make 567 dresses for the little girls who weren’t able to attend school because they lacked clothing. She later made twenty-two large Raggedy Ann & Andy dolls in response to another need for children’s toys.

Johnson attributes her many accomplishments to her mother, who modeled for the whole family what it meant to help other people. She says that she did what the Lord sent her out there to do. Church was important growing up and continues to be today at the age of 91. ❧

Diane Kaplan

Management Development and Philanthropy

Diane Kaplan took a small family foundation and turned it into the biggest, most influential philanthropic organization in Alaska history. A life of service was always her destiny, and Alaska is lucky she brought that destiny north.

Born in Brooklyn in 1957, the youngest child of a single mother, shaped by life where money was in short supply, Kaplan began her philanthropic career at age five collecting for Jerry's Kids, followed by UNICEF and Trees for Israel. She carried this avocation into adulthood, raising millions over the years for Alaska Native Heritage Center, public radio, Nudlaghi Leadership Institute, ad infinitum.

After graduating from the University of Pennsylvania, she went into broadcasting, moving to Alaska in 1983. As head of APRN she initiated the building of radio stations across the state, expanded news and public affairs programming from one daily broadcast to a full schedule, including the award-winning "National Native News" and "Native America Calling."

In 1995, while managing her own consulting practice, Ed Rasmuson tapped her to run his foundation. During her twenty-seven-year tenure as president of the Rasmuson Foundation, she elevated the lives of thousands of Alaskans. 🍷

Mary Anne Navitsky

First Native Woman Dentist and Native Art

Mary Anne Navitsky, a Haida/Tlingit, became the first female Alaska Native dentist in Alaska.

Navitsky successfully established the first Alaska Native woman owned and operated dental practice based in her hometown of Sitka. Her general practice of twenty-eight years embraced delivering dental services that included surrounding villages, particularly areas with limited dental services. She focused on preventive dentistry for children, elders, and those with special needs. In addition, Navitsky was the first Alaska Native woman dentist to serve on both the Alaska Board of Dental Examiners and the Regional Board of Dental Examiners, Western Region.

Navitsky was a dedicated provider who overcame great odds to attain her goals and believed that sharing her journey with many could help others reach their goals as well. She was a role model and a true leader who could inspire young and older people alike to fulfill their vision of themselves. 🍀

Esther Petrie

Humanitarian Health Supplies Worldwide

Esther Petrie has always been driven to help others. Her compassion and dedication in her charitable endeavors have earned her the distinction of “Angel of Mercy” in more than seventy-six countries.

Petrie collects out-of-date and expired medical supplies that are usually discarded or sent to be incinerated and sends them to Third World countries and clinics. She has sent more than 230,000 pounds of medical supplies to 116 countries on six continents around the world as of 2023.

The areas and people that Petrie has provided aid to include Native American reservations, communities in the Appalachian Mountains, the Gulf Coast and New Orleans after Hurricane Katrina, communities affected by the 2004 Indian Ocean earthquake and resulting tsunami, survivors of countless earthquakes, and a leper colony. Animal organizations that have benefited from her endeavors include Himalayan Rescue, The Crooked Tree Wildlife Sanctuary in Belize, and the Elephant Nature Park in Thailand. Supplies are delivered on a regular basis to the Addis Ababa Fistula Hospital in Ethiopia, a no-charge, no-patient-turned-away-facility where surgical repairs are performed for women suffering from traumatic childbirth situations.

Petrie’s work is entirely word-of-mouth, solely driven by volunteers and donated supplies. No money ever exchanges hands. She began her journey knowing that our wastefulness serves a purpose, and we can do so much more for those communities less fortunate than the ones we live in. 🌿

Libby Riddles

Iditarod Champion and Author

When the 1985 Iditarod Trail Sled dog Race began, Libby Riddles was a virtually unknown musher living in Teller, a remote village in Western Alaska. When the race ended, she was an international celebrity. By braving a storm that no other musher challenged, Riddles became the first woman to win the world's most significant sled dog race.

During a year of terrible storms that periodically interrupted the event, the leading mushers halted in a village check point. Only Riddles, who placed 18th and 20th in previous Iditarods, seized the moment and set out on the iffy trail beyond Shaktoolik. In first place, Riddles and her dogs negotiated a path through blowing snow in numbing cold. When visibility vanished, she zipped herself into her sled bag and spent an anxious night alone in the wilderness.

When the storm ceased, Riddles maintained her lead all the way to Nome, finishing in eighteen days. Riddles was instantly hailed as a woman of spirit and courage.

"I felt an amazing sense of achievement and great sense of camaraderie and pride with my dogs," Riddles said in a 1999 interview with NASA Quest. "I also felt like it wasn't just a victory for women but for the people in the Native village who has sponsored me. It was a great feeling to have them believe in me and come through."

It is widely acknowledged that Riddles' triumph is one of the race's pivotal moments, broadening the Iditarod's fan base while inspiring women worldwide.

Riddles wrote the acclaimed Race Across Alaska and two children's books. She is still involved with sled dogs through a helicopter-accessed mushing tour near Juneau and her Blazing Kennels in Homer. Riddles shares her story as a presenter for Princess Cruises and as a motivational speaker. 🐾

Martha “Marty” Kelsey Rutherford

Government Leadership and Public Service

Marty Rutherford is a lifelong Alaskan who is known for her work building and protecting Alaska’s natural resources through her long career in state service.

Rutherford’s life has been defined by many things, both personal and professional, but two instances stand out: Alaska’s largest natural disaster, the 1964 earthquake and subsequent tsunami in Valdez, and the Exxon Valdez oil spill. Both experiences taught Rutherford about problem-solving, perseverance in the face of adversity, the importance of community, and commitment to Alaska and its people.

Her distinguished career took her from local government—as Assistant City Manager in Valdez—through leadership positions in state government at the Department of Natural Resources and the former Department of Community and Regional Affairs. Rutherford worked under eight Alaska governors—Republican, Democrat, and Independent—and is considered one of a handful of Alaskans most knowledgeable about Alaska’s natural resources.

Rutherford was a key player in most of Alaska’s major resources decisions over the last four decades, including work on the Exxon Valdez Oil Spill Trustees Council, the Mental Health Trust Land Settlement, oil and gas leasing and unitization projects, and pipeline projects. For over a decade Rutherford led negotiations on potential development of Alaska’s North Slope natural gas, and in that role she sat across the table from representatives of the world’s largest oil and gas companies.

Throughout Rutherford’s career, she served as role model for women both by example and by taking the time to generously share her knowledge and experience. ☞
