

Alaska Women's Hall of Fame

13th Annual Induction Ceremony • 6:00 pm • October 19, 2021

Virtual Ceremony www.alaskawomenshalloffame.org

Dear Inductees and Viewers,

Welcome to the 13th year of the Alaska Women’s Hall of Fame. We are pleased to present ten women to be inducted this evening. We celebrate the women who have influenced the direction of Alaska.

Our virtual “Hall of Fame” is our web site, which is AlaskaWomensHallofFame.org. It includes the biographies and photos of nearly 200 honorees who have been inducted since 2009.

Thank you to all who nominated women. Anyone may nominate a woman using the application on our web site. The nomination process for 2022 will open tomorrow morning. Think of the women who have inspired you and nominate her for induction next year.

Thank you to our volunteer Board of Directors who manage the web site, write and proof the biographies, maintain communications with inductees and their families, raise money and plan this annual celebration. The Board members are Anita Halterman, Bonnie Jack, Judy Owens-Manley, Mary Whitmore, Monica Sterchi-Lowman, Pamela Kendrick, Pat Jarett, Rosemary Dunn and myself.

Thank you to Jon Butzke, owner of Talking Circle Media, who has volunteered to video record this and most inductions of the Alaska Women’s Hall of Fame, all of which you can hear and see on our web site.

Thank you to all who have contributed funds to the Alaska Women’s Hall of Fame, particularly this year, the Atwood Foundation, who provided a grant so we were able to strengthen the security on the web site after it was hacked and to also refresh the content.

This is the second year that we are conducting the induction virtually, in order to insure the health and safety of participants and viewers, thus, everyone has a front row seat to see and hear our amazing honorees.

Thanks for joining us,

Jane Anquik

President, Alaska Women’s Hall of Fame Board of Directors

The Alaska Women’s Hall of Fame

The Alaska Women’s Hall of Fame is a collaborative project of the Zonta Club of Anchorage, the Alaska Women’s Network, YWCA Anchorage, the Alaska Women for Political Action, the Anchorage Women’s Commission, the University of Alaska Anchorage, and a large number of interested Alaska women. Together, they created a place to remember and embrace the strong Alaska women who came before us and walk beside us today.

In 2008, the board of directors of the Alaska Women’s Network (AWN) discussed using its website to honor Alaska’s women as part of Alaska’s fifty-year statehood celebration. During this time, the Zonta Club of Anchorage was also considering a website to house a virtual Alaska women’s wall. Upon learning they shared an interest in a similar project, the two groups decided to collaborate.

Representatives of the AWN, the Zonta Club of Anchorage, and several interested women formed an informal steering committee. They began to solicit nominations from across the state and selected 50 women to induct on March 6, 2009. At this time, they launched alaskawomenshalloffame.org, a website hosting the biographies of the honorees.

The steering committee formalized the Alaska Women’s Hall of Fame as a 501(c)3 non-profit in 2013.

Agnes Coyle
1939 - 2020

Achievement in:
Promoting and Preserving
Alaska Native Art

Agnes Anne Coyle was born in Breese, Illinois, and moved to St. Louis in 1960 after graduating from DePaul Nursing School. Always drawn to action, she joined the team in the Emergency Department and quickly rose to become Head ER Nurse at City Hospital. It was there she met her husband, Dr. Maurice Coyle.

The Public Health Service deployed them to Anchorage in 1968 with three young boys in tow. While volunteering at the Alaska Native Hospital, Coyle and her friend Jeanne Dougherty envisioned and established the Native Hospital Craft Shop in a commandeered storage closet.

In 1985, Coyle and the shop established a scholarship fund, which has supported over 500 Native students over the years. In addition, they created the Auxiliary Heritage Collection, one of the finest Native/artwork collections in the state. In 1997, the Heritage Collection became the centerpiece décor in the new Alaska Native Medical Center on Tudor Road.

Coyle has been honored with the Governor’s First Lady Volunteer Award, the Governor’s Award for the Arts, the Eight Stars of Gold Citizenship Award, and the American Hospital Association Award for Volunteer Excellence. In addition, she was awarded Resolutions of Recognition by the Alaska Federation of Natives and the Alaska State Legislature in 1992.

Beyond the craft shop, Coyle was committed to helping the less fortunate in Anchorage. She helped found the Brother Francis Shelter and extensively supported Beans Café, Clare House, the Anchorage Society of St. Vincent de Paul, and St. Anthony’s Church. She gave herself through action – making meals, sharing time, and showing up to promote social justice. The phrase “Do good and avoid evil” guided her hard work and exemplified her kindness.

Brideen
Crawford Milner
1921-1997

Achievement In:
Banking, Business
& Philanthropy

Brideen Crawford Milner helped break the glass ceiling in banking on a state and a national level. She and her husband, Ben Crawford, co-founded City Bank of Anchorage in 1949, where over the next ten years, she served as an officer and head of public relations. They also co-founded a second bank – Alaska State Bank, initially based in Fairbanks in 1961.

Author H. Wendy Jones wrote: “A petite redhead blessed with an infectious sense of humor, Brideen is not only family orientated but also competent in business and active in politics.”

In the 1961 Who’s Who, Crawford Milner is listed as the youngest female chairman of a bank board globally. A widow with four children, she was a respected and admired business and civic leader who spoke on Alaska business issues and the role of women in business and banking. She was active in numerous professional organizations, including the National Association of Bank Women, Banking Public Relations Association, the executive committee of the Savings Division of the American Bankers Association, and the National Board of the U.S. Savings Bond Division of the U.S. Treasury. She was a Trustee of Alaska Methodist University plus active in many Anchorage and Alaska statewide groups.

In a 1968 interview, Crawford Milner summed up herself and her attitudes: “I am an Irish Catholic and a trustee of American (sic) Methodist University; I am a Democrat and backed Wally Hickel, a Republican for governor. You might say I am all mixed up, but I am just an individualist, as most Alaskans are.”

Linda Curda

Achievement in:
Community Health Education &
Alaska Native Arts

Linda Ruth (Guild) Curda is an advocate for health care and health care education in rural Alaska. She is also a tireless volunteer for the causes she holds dear.

After working as a staff nurse at the old PHS hospital in Bethel from 1972-1975, Curda became interested in public health and midwifery, prompting her to earn a Master's Degree of Public Health and Certified Nurse Midwife from Johns Hopkins University in 1977. Returning to Bethel in 1980, Curda worked with the Community Health Aide Program where she saw the potential for improving the curriculum and ways of teaching it to village health aides. After a pivotal village visit in 1981, she realized that health aides did not have the tools necessary to provide consistent, quality health care. Curda created the Patient Encounter form as a guide which was subsequently incorporated into the Community Health Aide/Practitioner Manual (CHAM), a step by step handbook for health aides to use in their home villages, facilitating communications between patient, health aide, and doctor.

In 2013 Curda took her volunteer spirit and health care knowledge to Old Fangak, South Sudan, to work at the clinic run by Dr. Jill Seaman. During her five-week stay, she provided patient care including prenatal and post-partum care to mothers in a country experiencing one of the highest maternal mortality rates in the world. She taught birth attendants to perform a non-surgical procedure that could stop post-partum hemorrhage.

The annual Cama-i Dance Festival in Bethel brings the Alaska Native and international dance worlds together for a weekend of celebration. As Coordinator since 1990, Curda personally meets each of the 20 visiting groups, treating them all like family. "Bethel becomes a village during Cama-i. It opens its heart."

Curda and her husband, Dale, have two children and four grandchildren.

Ermalee Hickel

1925-2017

Achievement in:
Social Services and Philanthropy

Ermalee Hickel's life revolved around helping Alaskans.

As Alaska's First Lady, Hickel would walk the streets of Juneau, listening to people as they shared the concerns they faced. Once the community realized she was sincerely interested in their lives, they began to share the problems and challenges they faced. One example was the costs associated with caring for disabled family members. Medicare and other programs would only pay the costs associated with severe disabilities if the disabled person was cared for in a hospital or institution. As a result of her advocacy, several administrative laws and regulations changed, giving Alaskans the support they need to care for their seriously disabled or mentally disabled family members at home.

Her strong sense of justice made it imperative to bring these problems to the governor, his staff, and the responsible agencies' attention. As a result, she became an unofficial advocate for Alaska's people, never taking credit for anything.

During her visit to rural villages, she discovered that fetal alcohol syndrome (FAS) was a problem throughout Alaska. As a result, she would talk about it wherever she went, making public service announcements on radio and TV. At that time, FAS was unknown to most of the public, but Hickel's leadership got the message out.

An ardent philanthropist, Hickel and her husband established the Walter J. and Ermalee Hickel Alaska Foundation as a fund within the Alaska Community Foundation. She also created the Hickel House at Providence Alaska Medical Center, which provides accommodations for outpatients and their families.

Countless Alaskans knew a better life because Ermalee Hickel listened.

Lynn Hartz

1952

Achievement in:
Nursing Advocacy,
Health Care Policy

Hartz was the first Advance Nurse Practitioner (ANP) appointed to the Alaska Board of Nursing. She wrote landmark regulations under a new Nurse Practice Act, spelling out the specifics of independent practice and prescriptive authority for ANPs. These new regulations allowed Alaskan ANPs to practice to the maximum educational level with full practice authority at a time when only three states had moved to this level of independence for ANPs. In addition, she provided the mechanism for ANPs to open practices throughout Alaska, resulting in significant increases in health care services with more provider options for Alaskans, particularly in rural and underserved areas. Her work served other states as a model for progressive regulations in their quest for independent practice for ANPs. Currently, 28 states allow ANPs full practice authority.

Hartz pioneered an ANP managed, federally funded colposcopy project designed to detect and prevent cervical cancer in low-income women. No other colposcopy clinics were operated by nurses. She authored national and international journal articles documenting the high quality of ANP services to demonstrate the benefits of using ANPs to manage clinics successfully. Her clinic also provided many enriching educational, clinical experiences to nursing students, medical students, and other health professionals.

Hartz furnished vital information on health and nursing issues to over 12,000 professional nurses in Alaska for over 13 years as managing editor of a quarterly newsletter. This newsletter provided a lifeline for professional nurses statewide. This newsletter was especially critical for nurses in rural and isolated areas of Alaska who were often the only providers in their regions with no other sources of professional communication.

Hartz continues to contribute to many professional nursing committees and organizations to advocate for nurses to make changes in health care policy that positively impact the quality of health care provided to Alaskans.

Barbara Hood

1955-

Achievement in:
Justice, Human Rights and the Arts

Barbara Hood has dedicated her life to human rights, social justice, and environmental stewardship through community engagement and the arts.

As an attorney, Hood represented Alaskans living in poverty at both the Fairbanks and Anchorage offices of Alaska Legal Services Corporation, worked on behalf of victims of child abuse and neglect at the Alaska Attorney General's office, and promoted civic learning and public understanding of our justice system as Communications Counsel for the Alaska Court System.

As a businesswoman, Hood co-founded Great Harvest Bread Co.-Anchorage with her husband and helped build its reputation for generosity to the community.

As an advocate, Hood served as a long-time volunteer for human rights and justice groups, including Amnesty International, Alaskans Against the Death Penalty, and Justice Not Politics Alaska.

As a conservationist, Hood helped organize neighborhood campaigns to protect parks and open space, co-founding Friends of the Coastal Trail and Friends of Near Point and serving on the Anchorage Parks and Recreation Commission. And as a writer, she has authored many columns and stories with social justice themes and helped lead 49 Writers, Inc., a statewide writers' organization.

Throughout her years of public service, Hood has offered her talents as an editor and photographer to educational outreach efforts on behalf of non-profit organizations serving Alaskans marginalized by life's challenges. She has received numerous awards for both her professional and volunteer work, and she continues to volunteer hundreds of hours each year. "I've never really had a firm plan for my life or career," Hood says, "except to follow where my conscience leads me. I'm deeply grateful for the many community service opportunities that have come my way; they have truly fed my soul."

Lucile
"Lucy" Hope
1953

Achievement in:
Advocacy, Educational Leadership, and Community Service

Alaska's children with disabilities gained a tireless, innovative advocate in 1980 when Lucy Hope moved from Wisconsin to begin a teaching career culminating as the Executive Director of Special Education for the Matanuska-Susitna Borough School District. A love of the outdoors brought her north, but her love of children and community fueled her achievements as an educational leader, mentor, community organizer, and volunteer.

Her passion focused on those with the most intensive needs. For example, Valley students with severe behavioral needs typically attended residential programs out of state. However, Hope wanted all students to be near their families, so she led a team creating a specialized school supporting children with behavioral challenges. Mat-Su Day School started in portable classrooms in a parking lot, but through Hope's leadership and advocacy, she secured a $10 million local school bond to build a state-of-the-art facility. Similarly, she spearheaded Project SEARCH, an employment program for young adults with special needs aged 18-22 at Mat-Su Regional Hospital.

Hope is a constant community volunteer and organizer. She was the state competition director, coach and race organizer for Special Olympics, a steering committee member for Wasilla Wonderland Park, and one of the first women on Alyeska's volunteer ski patrol. In 1982, in partnership with the Easter Seals Society, Hope opened a residential summer camp for youth with special needs and then served as director for four years. Throughout Hope's career, she mentored her employees, families, and students to become future leaders and advocates.

In 2019 Hope was recognized as Alaska's Distinguished Special Education Director. In addition, she has been honored as a Mat-Su Woman of Influence, twice as a First Lady's Volunteer Award winner, Special Olympics Coach of the Year, and MSBSD Volunteer of the Year for work driving the activity bus.

Margaret
"Mardy" Murie
1902 - 2003

Achievement in:
Conservation Movement

Mardy Murie has been called the "Mother of Wilderness" and "Grandmother of the Conservation Movement" by both the Sierra Club and the Wilderness Society for her life's work of connecting with people, networking, writing, and speaking out to protect wilderness. Born in 1902, Murie moved to Alaska at the age of nine. She was the first woman to graduate from the University of Alaska. Two months after graduation, she married Olaus Johan Murie on the banks of the Yukon River. She spent her "honeymoon" on a 550-mile journey. This journey became material for her memoir and inspiration for John Denver's ballad, "A Song for All Lovers."

The couple moved and bought a dude ranch outside of Moose, Wyoming. The ranch became the hub of activists working on the problem of protecting wilderness. Here Mardy worked alongside Olaus on a campaign to protect the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. They helped persuade President Eisenhower to set aside 8,000,000 acres as the Arctic National Wildlife Range. In addition, she assisted in the survey of potential wilderness areas for the National Park Service, which resulted in the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act, which doubled the size of the protected area in 1980.

Murie received numerous awards for her work: in 1976 she was honored by the University of Alaska with a Doctor of Humane Letters degree, the Audubon Medal (1980), the John Muir Award (1983), the Robert Marshall Conservation Award (1986), and in 1998, President Bill Clinton awarded her the Presidential Medal of Freedom. She died at her ranch in 2003, at the age of 101.

Cynthia "Cindy" Roberts
1946

Achievement in:
Government Service,
Community Organization,
Writer/Publisher

Cindy Roberts is the epitome of a fearless, inspiring, creative thinker and teambuilder instrumental in several innovative organizations. She was a founding team member of Commonwealth North, the World Trade Center of Anchorage, the Alaska Science and Technology Foundation, Backbone, and Bridge Builders of Anchorage.

Roberts served in the Denali Commission and managed a US Department of Agriculture $300 million grant program that supported projects in numerous rural Alaska villages and communities. She was Special Assistant to the Commissioners of Alaska Department of Natural Resources and the Department of Commerce, Community and Economic Development, finishing in 1994 as Acting Commissioner of DCCED for the Hickel Administration.

Roberts has been, and is still, committed to the idea of a natural gas pipeline and authored a glossary to clarify the issue,

Cracking the Code: A Citizen's Guide to the Alaska Natural Gas Pipeline Discussion evolved through growing editions in 2008, 2012 and 2018.

In 2017 Roberts and her husband, Malcolm, co-authored Magic Moments: Battles Worth Fighting and Joys Worth Celebrating: An Alaskan Memoir. This personal history of contemporary Alaska provides backstories of the movers and shakers who shaped our state and stories regarding Roberts' civic and political achievements. Including Roberts' Mrs. America experience, which gave her a national platform and spotlighted her as a proud mother in a successful two-career family. Her professional and marital partnership with Malcolm is now in its 51st year. Both have played significant roles in building an inclusive Alaska.

Through all this, the Roberts were very active in the worlds of their three "Next Generation" children.

Mary Ann Iqilan
Warden
1942-2020

Achievement in:
Native Languages,
Religious Studies

Mary Ann Iqilan Warden was a lifelong learner who dedicated her life to others. The heart of her family, a focus of faith in her various communities, and a dedicated advocate for women, prisoners, and youth, Warden was a powerful Alaska Native role model who left a lasting legacy, especially among those in her beloved Arctic.

Warden grew up in Kaktovik. In 1978 she earned her Associate of Applied Science in Criminal Justice from the University of Alaska Fairbanks.

Before becoming a pastor, Warden served as Choir Director at First Presbyterian Church in Fairbanks. She was involved in the weekly services held in Iñupiaq and the Presbyterian Eskimo Hour; a weekly radio hour that involved singing. Her love of music was contagious, and church leaders began to call on her to lead singing gatherings.

In 1989 she earned her Master of Divinity at the University of Dubuque Theological Seminary and was ordained in 1990, becoming the first Alaska Native Woman ordained a Minister of the Word and Sacrament in the Presbyterian Church.

As Associate Pastor and Director of Native Ministries at the Northern Light United Church in Juneau, Warden helped revive that congregation's Native ministry by encouraging the use of the Tlingit language. There are several recordings of Warden singing How Great Thou Art in the Tlingit and the Iñupiaq languages.

Warden eventually returned to the Arctic and to serving her hometown. She served on several committees and ministry teams. Two particularly notable contributions were her service as the Spiritual Director of the Presbytery Reconciliation Team in 2013 and the Native American Consulting Committee moderator. During Warden's tenure as the committee leader, the committee began to change its mission and is the body that sets ministry policy for villages in Alaska.

Warden died in 2020 and is remembered as a loved mother, auntie, and sister, always generous with her love.

Thank You
TALKING CIRCLE MEDIA

Talking Circle Media has supported the Alaska Women's Hall of Fame by documenting our induction ceremonies, all but our first year. Most recently, Talking Circle has hosted our 2020 and 2021 induction ceremonies online. So every time we say, "We couldn't have done it without their support," we mean it literally, we couldn't have it without their support and generosity!

Additional support was provided by:

Atwood Foundation, Sundog Media, Bovey Trophies, UAA
